Prisoner Correspondence Project

for people in prison and their outside allies.

a listing of socially conscious prisoners seeking correspondence with like-minded people

compiled by the break the chains collective

i believe in living.

i believe in living.

i believe in the spectrum of Beta days and Gamma people.

i believe in sunshine.

In windmills and waterfalls,
tricycles and rocking chairs;

And i believe that seeds grow into sprouts.

And sprouts grow into trees.

i believe in the magic of the hands.

And in the wisdom of the eyes.

i believe in rain and tears.

And in the blood of infinity.

i believe in life.

And i have seen the death parade
march through the torso of the earth, sculpting mud bodies in its path

i have seen the destruction of the daylight and seen bloodthirsty maggots

prayed to and saluted

i have seen the kind become the blind

and the blind become the blind

in one easy lesson.

i have walked on cut grass.

i have eaten crow and blunder bread and breathed the stench of indifference

i have been locked by the lawless.

Handcuffed by the haters.

Gagged by the greedy.

And, if i know anything at all,

it's that a wall is just a wall and nothing more at all.

It can be broken down.

i believe in living

i believe in birth.

i believe in the sweat of love and in the fire of truth.

And i believe that a lost ship,

steered by tired, seasick sailors,

can still be guided home to port.

Prisoner Correspondence Project

Prisons are warehouse cages, made of cement and steel, where too many people are confined too close together in the System's attempts to divide and conquer. Prisons magnify what's going on in "society" on the "outside". Race and Class Warfare against those imprisoned is obvious given the statistics of who's behind bars.

This Prisoner Correspondence Project (PCP) is about linking struggles. The prisoners who have provided their information for this directory are reaching out to seek correspondence with potential allies. The PCP is designed to connect folks who are working toward radical change within frameworks of anti-racist, anti-imperialist, anti-homophobic, anti-sexist, pro-sovereignty, environmental &/or economic justice movements.

Writing to Prisoners (a little how-to)

from <http://www.spiritoffreedom.org.uk/writing.htm>

One of the main hurdles that blocks many from corresponding with prisoners is a feeling of being intimidated about writing to a prisoner for the first time. It is very hard to write a letter to someone you don't know: people find that they don't know what to say, they feel there are things they can't talk about, or think that prisoners won't be interested in what they have to say. This is a problem for most of us, so we've drawn up some suggestions to help you. Obviously these aren't rigid guidelines, and we don't pretend to have solved all problems here.
Different people will write different letters. It's about linking struggles. Developing relationships and learning about the perseverance and work necessary for radical change are the goals.

FIRST THINGS FIRST

Don't necessarily expect a reply to a card or letter.
Prisoners may not write back or may take awhile.
Some prisons restrict the number of letters a prisoner can write or receive. Class plays out in prison as it does on the outside, so remember that prisoners may have to buy stamps and envelopes. A lot of prisons allow stamps &/or s.a.e to be included with a card or letter, but some don't. Letters also get stopped, read, delayed, 'diverted'. If you suspect this, you can send it Recorded Delivery, which costs a lot but requires them to open it in the prisoners presence. Put a return address, including a first name or initial and last name, on the envelope, not just so the prisoner can reply (!), but also because it's required prison protocol. It doesn't have to be your address, you can use a PO Box number. Date all correspondence.

COMMON SENSE TIPS

Use a "neutral" address, such as a Postal Box. Do not divulge sensitive personal information (i.e. home address, phone number, bank or credit card info), particularly with someone you haven't dealt with before. This is for your security as well as a prisoner's. Authorities often read letters and sensitive information can get into the wrong hands. Do not send money or honor immediate requests for money.

WRITING FOR THE FIRST TIME

Say who you are, and, if it's relevant, that you're from such and such a group. Some people reckon it's better to be upfront about your politics so prisoners can make the choice about corresponding. Write where you heard about them and their case.

The first letter can be reasonably short, maybe a postcard. Obviously when you get to know people better you'll have more to talk about.

If you are writing to a "framed" prisoner, who you believe to be innocent, it helps to say so. This gives people confidence to know that you believe them.

Some people may be afraid to write about what's up with their lives, thinking this may depress or not interest people imprisoned, especially prisoners with long sentences. In some cases this may be true, but on the whole a letter is the high-point of the day for most prisoners. Prison life is dead boring, and any news that livens it up, whether it's about people they know or not, is generally welcome. Prisoners are reaching out by providing their information and you are taking a chance by initiating correspondence with someone from this manual. Use your sense, don't write about anything that is likely to get a prisoner in shit with the screws, or get you or anyone else in trouble with the cops.

THEY'RE IN THERE FOR US, WE'RE OUT HERE FOR THEM

For people imprisoned from out movements and struggles it's vital to keep them involved in the ongoing resistance ~ news of actions, discussing ideas and strategies with them, etc. Let the other person direct what publications and direct communication is wanted. Some people will just want to keep their head down til they get out.

This was adapted from a leaflet produced by the Anarchist Black Cross.

A few dos and don'ts on writing prisoners whose backgrounds/politics you may not know.

Do think ahead. Research local prison regulations. Learn about the prisoner before writing. When first writing to an incarcerated person make sure you ask them specifically what the rules are for writing letters, and make note of them. No one under age 18 should be writing a prisoner - this is for the prisoner's security as well as the writer's.

Do be patient. Keep in mind many "supporters" or people who've written before may have stopped writing them, made promises/lied to them. If you receive a letter back that appears cynical or angry, responding with more anger is not helpful.

Do deal with the right channels. If a prisoner wants you to send a book, ask what channels their institution requires, or refer them to a Book-to-Prisoners project near their unit. If a prisoner is getting out in the next few weeks, do not offer your place to stay (no matter how desperate they sound) unless you have had corresponded for a significant amount of time and are in contact with both a parole officer and a prison intermediary (e.g. prison chaplain). Even in cases like this, it is far more helpful to a prisoner to help them secure employment and develop a support base (whether through a church, mosque, family, friends, etc.). Chances are, there's a legal process to be dealt with in cases like this and they need to be followed by both you and the prisoner. However, use your head and don't land in a bad situation or one that will land the prisoner back in jail.

Do not make promises. Many well-meaning people write letters offering support to a prisoner, or make offers for help out of good will. Unfortunately, most never follow through and build false hope in a prisoner. This is not fair to them. If you're writing, don't make promises. Don't offer to do a support campaign if you can't make the time. Don't offer to send items when you can't afford it. Be honest.

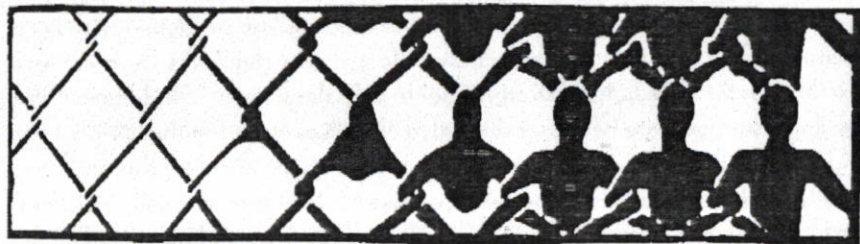

Do not romanticize prisons or prisoners. Many activists have ideas about who prisoners are, why they're locked up, the system, etc. While it's correct to have political clarity about incarceration and the nature of the criminal justice system, it is not correct to romanticize a prisoner, anything they might be locked up for (especially a "social crime") and their lives. We all have our strengths and weaknesses. It is dangerous to make assumptions. Some are estranged from their families as a direct result of their own actions. Some may have learned manipulative behaviors over the years. We are all human beings.

Do not discuss potentially illegal political action with a prisoner. This is for your security and theirs. Prisoners have been, and can be, implicated for outside action that violates the law. Be mindful that if authorities find such information in the hands of prisoners, prisoners can face added time and harsh treatment.

Do not attempt to place political judgments on prisoners' experiences. Some prisoners, out of desperation, write publications to get pen pals and may not agree completely with the views of the paper, but read it for information. Some prisoners have converted to a Christian or Muslim. Do not attack or insult a prisoner because of their religions, preferences or experiences. Rather than attack a prisoner, it's best to be polite, but firm, if there's something you'd rather not discuss or find objectionable. If the prisoner declares her/himself a white supremacist, you are well within your rights to explain your disagreements, encourage them to reconsider their views and discontinue the relationship. Please be aware that several white supremacist gangs have ties to the outside from prison and it is smart not to get into insults or threats against such prisoners. Don't send literature unless requested and be aware you don't have to go with every request.

Good luck!

37y/o from Boston, MA. In prison for grand larceny.
Three yr sentence ends in
'05. I do civil litigation. I was featured by the Boston Globe 9/29/87
for 34 consec months in cell block #10. Am well read, looking to relocate upon release. My forte is cooking gourmet food and am considering getting into catering. Looking to correspond with one who can articulate and communicate.
Conventional methods bore
me. Life doesn't stop here.

I'm a 44y/o black prisoner in TX for ~15yrs. Consider myself very racially and politically aware. Let's discuss ways to make a contribution to this life. I enjoy sports and most literature-esp. those on social/psych conditions /ing of oppressed peoples. I look for people who have re-educated themselves from false public education, who have separated themselves from the majority group/collective thinking. We need fresh minds and goals for a new direction for all people.
